

Tray's illness. Really showing their love and concern. Last Sat we had a wonderful reunion - Leg, Marty, Greg & Emily, David, Karen, Mark David, Stephen, Michael, Nancy & Daug, Dad & Charlotte & I. We showed family movies.

Now that Tray has been going back to church (even though he doesn't feel too well) the phone has been ringing off its hook and people have been bringing him their problems the things that Bishop's have to do. I guess I'm glad I'm not a man. I don't have to worry about being the Bishop. Tray doesn't tell me who or what or why but he says the worst part is finding out about all the problems he doesn't know people had.

Then, too, the church is encouraging people to 'lay their unconfessed sins before the Bishop so they can get them up & out of their lives & go forward. Tray says some of them want to get rid of things that happened when they were little kids. I guess if confessing them gets them out of their subconscious & out of their systems so they can forget & forgive themselves it's a good thing & if hard on the Bishop.

David is putting Dad's press together and Tray is pleased with his progress and aptitude. I've got to get up to see Dad, but don't want to go until I get over these colds.

March - a year ago Nancy and Daug got married. Tonight they brought Carl up to for me to tend while they went to dinner & a show. They seem so happy. Daug got her a wedding band and diamond ring. She had had a simple gold band before.

We had our doubts about whether they should marry or not but they both really wanted it and they've really done well. Daug is working for Mega and is training to be a machinist. When he qualifies Mega will about double his salary. A year ago they had a ceremony in our home. Bishop Band married them - there were both families present & a few of Nancy & Daug's close friends. Then we had a reception. We hadn't sent out invitations and everyone in the ward came & she got everything she needed. Nancy wore the white dress I had made for her the previous Easter & wore a coronet of flowers in her hair. The picture will be complete when they go to the temple. I hope they will want it. Carl's horn Sept 5 is a really cute thing. She is smart as a whip & crawling around & rolling back & forth.
