Dear Family,

I suppose the big news in our family is the baby will show up this month. The doctor said it could come any time now. Charlotte's due date isn't until the day after Thanksgiving. I keep telling everyone that we are going to have a little turkey.

Last night was the cultural council's "Dinner Theater". There was a live band playing dinner music, prime rib, 2 plays (one act) and a choral reading. There were about 145 people in attendance. I was heavily involved in building props and clean up. We had a serious problem in arranging for tables. We were planning on borrowing the church tables. The building custodian said, "absolutely not!" They can only be used for church functions. Yes there are still Pharisees, even in our own church. After going through our bishop, we were able to use the tables.

The haunted house was a good fund raiser for Halloween. Charlotte as usual was ultimately responsible for both of the above events. She carries all of the headaches even if not physically working. It has been difficult to pull her away from the phone. She needs more rest. These are the last two events this year. The baby can come now.
