

This completes our general description of non-equilibrium two-phase flow. In the following section we approximate the constitutive relations in order to apply them in numerical calculations.