

During this work a successful experimental technique was developed which, in conjunction with a gas gun used for impact studies, applies the required uniaxial strain field and magnetic field and measures the subsequent shock induced demagnetization.