In 1948, the United States implemented a “Universal Military Training Act” for 19-yearolds. The church was permitted to send only one 19-year-old per ward on a mission, so Delbert’s mission, having already joined the Army, was to the Seventh Infantry Division in Korea. There, the division chaplain held Catholic and non-denominational Protestant services in the mess tent. Delbert got a list of church members from him and invited them to meet together in the tent as often as possible. The Church had provided miniature scriptures and miniature hymnbooks to all military men. Delbert had also brought a Sunday School lesson manual. The chaplain had a foot-pump organ and Delbert was able to accompany the men as they sang. Below, is a picture of one of the services.

SOLDIERS AT CHURCH. …* study hour of LDS men in the Seventh Infantry Division Command Post in Central Korea, meeting in a tent. Left to right, front row, Pvt. Roland A. Harvey, Weaverville, Calif.; Pfc. Harold O. Powell, San Francisco; Pfc. John H. Morck, Salt Lake City; Sgt. Delbert H. Hall, Ogden; Sgt. Charles M. Price, Ogden; Sgt. Carl C. Swenson, Ogden; First Lt. Ralph W. Pearson, Salt Lake City. Back row, Cpl. Therian L. Cook, Edwardsville, Ill.; Cpl. Bert E. Wilde, American Fork; Pvt. Donald G. Grow, Salt Lake City; Cpl Carrol Edvalson, Ogden, and Sgt James L. Saint, Columbus, Georgia. (U. S. Army Photo.)
*Note: Erroneous information, here, was omitted.